

The contents of each `.txt` file in this directory are merged together. Each line is a Perl 5 regular expression. Nothing is guaranteed about the order in which they're merged. -- If this is a problem, please reach out.

Note: order of the contents of these files can matter. Lines from an individual file are handled in file order. Files are selected in alphabetical order.

- d, r, and t are specifically to work around a quirk in the spell checker: it often sees C strings of the form "Hello\nwerld". And would prefer to spot the typo of `werld`.
- patterns is the main list -- there is nothing particularly special about the file name (beyond the extension which is important).